HUNT

Synopsis

Hunt is about a group of Belfast teenagers playing their version of hide and seek, which entails 'borrowing' objects from their neighbours' back gardens, and 'dumping' them at the 'box' without being caught, by either the official pursuers or the neighbours whose gardens they are infringing upon – hence the chances of being caught are twofold. The more outlandish and extraordinary the object and the more difficult it is to acquire, the more kudos you score. Nearly all of these teenagers are far too old to play this 'kids' game, and it's February, it's freezing and there's a storm coming. Begrudgingly the 'band' gets back together, for one last game. However, this could be the worst decision of their young lives as little do they know that the rumours about the strange, predatory 'Man in the Van' are true and the even stranger, dangerous, the one everyone has been warned to stay away from, 'Mad' Danielle, is back on the block. This is a hunt they will never forget.
